Nutter: 'No exceptions' for curfew

More than 60 teenagers under 18 were picked up by police for breaking the city's new 9 p.m. downtown curfew, with a majority picked up Friday night, officials said.

Many of the Friday night violators were caught on South Street, police said. All were picked up by parents and issued warnings.

Twelve teens were picked up on Saturday.

"It is strict and serious, and there are no exceptions."

"I am sure that young people and their parents have now gotten the message. We are going to continue to promote the positive, but we will also have continued [curfew] enforcement," Mayor Michael Nutter said. METRO/AW

What's all the smoke about?

Store owners near South Street's new head shops not pleased ◗ But some welcome Rocky Keid's shops ◗ Keid opened them in family feud

PRICE OZAROSKI/METRO

▶ Philly Dream Shop has the most colorful and noticeable store sign of Keid's three stores opened recently on South Street.

Many business owners' dreams of a South Street on the rise are going up in smoke.

In the past six months, three head shops opened on the strip within six blocks of one another, all operated by owner Rocky Keid. Their neon-lit windows are crammed with glass pipes, hookahs, vaporizers and even gas mask bongs. Keid's reason for the deluge? A family feud.

"There's a big competition with my family. Everybody tries to be better than the other, that's what I'm trying to do," said Keid, whose relatives own a minimart between Sixth and Seventh. "They own only one and I own three."

But his choice of wares have many upset.

"I don't want South Street to be known for this. When a person sells hookahs, someone else will sell something to put into it and I don't want those kinds of people around here," said a neighboring business owner, who asked not to be named.

According to Hot Diggity owner Keith Garabedian, L&I announced at a recent business association meeting that it had unsuccessfully taken Keid to court. "We want more arts and culture. [Keid's markets] are not on board with that," Garabedian said. "South Street has always been a place for teen and college kids, but it shouldn't be a block that facilitates drug use."

"I never went to court and nobody sued me," Keid said. "I have all my licenses and everything, no problems with the city."

Not all businesspeople want to see Keid shut down. With the past decade's exodus of South Street anchors like Pearl Art & Craft Supply and Tower Records, many see any development as a good thing. "Anything's better than an empty storefront," said Ray Baxley, manager of Benjamin Lovell Shoes.

ALEX WIGGLESWORTH
awigglesworth@metro.us

Where's the Irish food?

One thing that has left many neighbors scratching their heads is the words "Irish Food" prominently featured on the stores' signs, along with "Gift Shop," "Grocery" and "Souvenirs."

"I went in there and asked the clerk where the Irish food was, and he told me, 'Well, we sell potato chips,'" said one neighbor. An employee referred Metro to a small rack containing several European-import candy bars.

"It's not really Irish food, but we call it Irish snacks," Keid said.

Nobody's really sure on zoning

Recent and proposed changes to the city's antiquated zoning code are confusing to area business owners — and to the city itself.

"Philadelphia has, at times, attempted to craft laws regulating sales of paraphernalia and repeatedly lost on the state level," the city's Department of Licenses and Inspections spokeswoman Maura Kennedy. "The state says these things are permissible business uses. I can understand the neighborhood's frustration, but unfortunately, the state can rule against us."

When asked about the portion of zoning code stating that a commercial zone such as South Street required a special use certificate following community input for stores selling such wares, L&I would only state, "We're looking into the matter further." METRO/AW

Quoted

"An incident like this doesn't change in any way, shape or form, the great night young people had at this event. And overall, it was a pretty quiet night in Philadelphia."

Putting the 'nice' back in Nicetown

Decade in the making, revitalization of neighborhood starts with train station SEPTA spending $30 million on historic Wayne Junction

For years, Nicetown resident Nikki Bagby has heard people talk about her community as a place to leave, but that's gradually changing with a flurry of new development.

This past weekend, the Nicetown CDC held its annual "Give Back to the Community Festival," which generally celebrates residents. But this year, residents had something to celebrate in a neighborhood dealing with high crime and the loss of industry.

More than 80 affordable housing units are expected to come from current and planned construction, and Temple Physicians will lease more than 2,300 square feet of commercial space in one of the buildings. But the centerpiece of development is SEPTA's $30 million renovation of the Wayne Junction station — a major hub for Regional Rail riders.

"It's been a miracle," said Bagby, 39, a longtime resident. "Anytime you take a blighted community … and help them change their mindset economically, socially and mentally, it helps them appreciate things and feel a sense of wealth."

Majeedah Rashid, chief operating officer of the Nicetown CDC, said Kenny Gamble's Universal Companies has been a major partner in the rebuilding, but their efforts have also attracted interest from outside entities like Community Builders Group, a national nonprofit organization.

There is also an effort to rehabilitate some of the community's existing housing stock, Rashid said.

"We can't build new stuff with already existing stuff looking crazy," she said.

SOLOMON D. LEACH
sleach@metro.us

Missed gamble

Several years ago, it looked like the community might get a break when Donald Trump proposed a casino at the former Budd plant; but the proposal was not selected for one of the city's two gaming licenses.

"It was a long struggle. We've been [working on] it for 10 years now," Rashid said.

Pakistan let China see stealth copter

Financial Times reports China given access to special chopper ◗ Could hurt US-Pakistan relationship ◗ Blackhawk modified for stealth capability

Pakistan gave China access to the previously unknown "stealth" helicopter that crashed during the commando raid that killed Osama bin Laden in May despite explicit requests from the CIA not to, the Financial Times reported yesterday.

The revelation, if confirmed, is likely to further shake the U.S.-Pakistan relationship, which has been improving slightly after hitting its lowest point in decades following the May 2 bin Laden raid.

During the raid, one of two modified Blackhawk helicopters, believed to employ unknown stealth capability, malfunctioned and crashed, forcing the commandos to abandon it.

"The U.S. now has information that Pakistan, particularly the ISI, gave access to the Chinese military to the downed helicopter in Abbottabad," the paper quoted a person "in intelligence circles" as saying.

Pakistan, which enjoys a close relationship with China, allowed Chinese intelligence officials to take pictures of the crashed chopper as well as take samples of its special "skin" that allowed the American raid to evade Pakistani radar, the newspaper reported.

No one from the Pakistani army was available for comment, but Pakistan's top spy agency, denied the report. The paper said Pakistan's top general, chief of army staff Ashfaq Kayani, denied that China had been given access. REUTERS

$9B

Despite the billions in aid, Pakistan still considers China a more reliable ally than the United States. Trade with Pakistan is worth $9 billion a year for Pakistan, and China is its top arms supplier.

Just for that ...

Shortly after the raid, Pakistan hinted that it might give China access to the downed chopper, given its fury over the raid, which it considers a grievous violation of its sovereignty.

WASHINGTON. President Barack Obama hits the road today for a Midwestern bus tour that he hopes will leave doubts over his leadership behind in Washington.

Pawlenty exits race for White House

Former Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty became the first major casualty in the marathon presidential campaign yesterday while fellow Republicans Michelle Bachmann and Rick Perry built momentum in the race.

Pawlenty, once seen as a strong contender for the Republican nomination to face Democratic President Barack Obama in the November 2012 election, dropped out a day after a disappointing showing in Iowa's straw poll, a key early test of strength among his party's candidates.

Former Massachusetts governor Mitt Romney is the early front-runner in the Republican race, but he must fend off a surging Bachmann — who won the poll — and Perry, the governor of Texas who announced his candidacy on Saturday in South Carolina. REUTERS

Law school grads try skills on their schools

New graduates file suit against colleges Wannabe lawyers say they were misled by false data Now drowning without jobs and tons of debt

The hornets nest

Both schools vehemently denied claims of misleading potential students as a means of filling seats.

James Thelen, Cooley's general counsel and associate dean for legal affairs, said the school already filed its own suit against the law firm's lawyers for defamation when they began their investigation last month. "We understand that three of the four named plaintiffs have established and are working in their own law firms," Thelen said.

If you graduate from law school but struggle to get a job, whose fault is it? According to a New York City law firm, it could be your school's fault.

Kurzon Strauss LLP has filed class action lawsuits against New York Law School and Thomas M. Cooley Law School for exaggerating postgraduate employment and salary rates in order to recruit students. Seven former students who graduated from either NYLS or Thomas Cooley are behind the suit.

"We are bringing these suits because thousands of young lawyers, like the plaintiffs, struggle to purchase a home, raise a family and make investments because they leveraged their future to a law school based on inaccurate information," said Jesse Strauss, a Kurzon Strauss partner. "It is time for the legal academy to own up to this problem."

It's no secret that the job market is bleak, no matter the degree you hold. However, these lawsuits say the schools actually reported inaccurate data about their students' employment prospects by classifying graduates as "full-time" when in fact they only had part-time or temporary positions.

The Game instructs: Prank tha police?

The Game is so tough, so street and so hard that he shows it by ... pranking the Compton police station?

On Friday, the Compton native sent out a message on his Twitter account encouraging his 580,000 followers to call a posted number if they wanted an internship. The phone number was really the official help line for the Compton sheriff's station.

"It was almost like a symphony of misery. You've got a multitude of phones ringing simultaneously," said headquarters bureau Capt. Mike Parker to the L.A. Times about the prank, which he likened to a "phone flash mob." During the three-hour cascade of calls asking about the internship, the police station also took legit calls about a missing person, a spousal abuse incident, two robberies and a stolen vehicle, per the Times. Parker, who figured out what was happening rather early, tweeted The Game to have him take down the post, to which the rapper replied: "Yall can track a tweet down but cant solve murders ! Dat was an accident but maybe now yall can actually do yall job."

Is it me or is it hard to do your job when you're fielding thousands of bogus calls about a fake internship? In my day, illiterate rappers settled their stupid, meaningless scores with illegally obtained weapons, not their Twitter accounts. Next thing you know, Suge Knight is going to start calling 911 to ask them if their fridge is running.

Can Myers still fit into those Powers pants?

If, during the U.K. riots, you thought: "If only Austin Powers were still around" (note: I'm pretty sure none of you thought that), rest assured! Mike Myers has signed a deal to star in a fourth "Austin Powers" movie, according to HitFix. There's no word on whether Jay Roach, who directed the first three films, will be returning as well. Myers' last live-action starring role was in 2008's "The Love Guru," which was a critical and commercial failure.

Great. Just when people stopped saying, "Yeah, baby!" as a non-hilarious catchphrase, it rears its ugly head again.

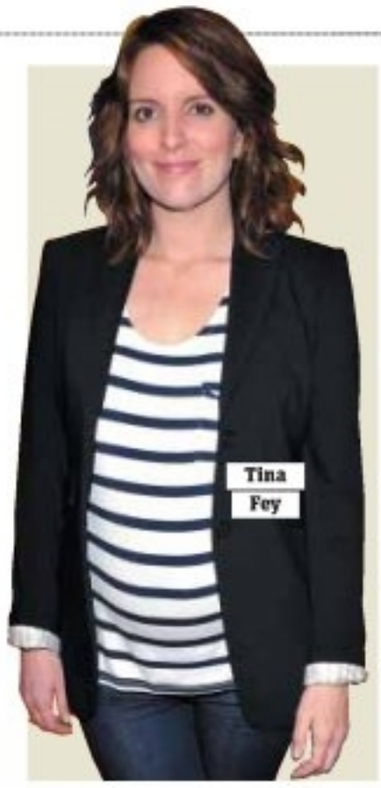
Talking points

Her therapist takes Visa?

Lindsay Lohan has reportedly started therapy for her issues, as ordered by the court — and just in time, as the deadline for the troubled actress to start treatment is later this week, according to E! Online. During a court appearance last month, Lohan had told the judge she was trying to find the cash to pay for therapy. In response, the judge told Lohan's lawyer that the actress "needs to find an individual therapist that takes a credit card."

Welcome, Penelope Athena!

"30 Rock" star Tina Fey and husband Jeff Richmond welcomed their second daughter last week, her rep confirms to Us Weekly. Penelope Athena was born Aug. 10, joining her big sister, 5-year-old Alice. Fey wrote in her memoir, "Bossypants," that she felt compelled to give Alice a sibling: "I thought that raising an only child would be the norm in Manhattan, but my daughter is the only child in her class without a sibling. Most kids have at least two," she wrote. "Who will be my daughter's family when my husband and I are dead from stress-induced cankers? She must have a sibling."



Hilary Duff is pregnant

Hilary Duff and husband Mike Comrie are expecting their first baby, Duff, 23, announced on her website yesterday. The post — which celebrated her one-year anniversary to the Pittsburgh Penguins player — exclaimed, "We also want to share the exciting news that…BABY MAKES THREE!!! We are extremely happy and ready to start this new chapter of our lives." In a recent interview with Metro, the star said she wanted to wait to start a family. "We've only been married a year, and he plays hockey so he's away from September to April, and we don't really get that much time together. So we're looking to wait. I still want to work more," she told us. Looks like she changed her mind?

These stars were paid to appear in Las Vegas over the weekend

2: Pauly D had to compete against the skills of Nick Cannon, who was spinning tunes on the same night at the Planet Hollywood Resort.

3: Joe Jonas celebrated his birthday at HAZE Nightclub at ARIA in CityCenter on Saturday. Nice matching bracelet and necklace set, Joe!

4: Leonard Nimoy thrilled his legions of fans at the Official Star Trek Convention at the Rio Las Vegas Hotel & Casino on Saturday. It is very doubtful they went to party with Pauly D and Nick Cannon afterwards.

5: Carmen Electra hosted a party at the Azure pool at The Palazzo.

Gloria Steinem is still fighting

The women's rights activist says 'the movement is young' Tonight, she recalls her life in the new HBO documentary, 'Gloria: In Her Own Words'

ANNIE LEIBOVITZ/COURTESY OF HBO

▶ Gloria Steinem is the subject of "Gloria: In Her Own Words," premiering tonight at 9 on HBO.

No word quite describes Gloria Steinem like "fighter." A driving force behind the modern women's liberation movement, Steinem shares her struggles — those for gender equality, as well as the strife of her early days and later, a battle against breast cancer — in the new HBO film, "Gloria: In Her Own Words." One message of the documentary: The fight isn't over yet.

"If you think of the suffragists [or] abolitionists, movements have to last about 100 years to be really absorbed into a culture," Steinem says. "And we're about 40 some years into [women's rights]. So I don't know how to break it to you, but I would say we have, like, 60 years to go."

But take heart, activists: "I'm old, but the movement is young," the 77-year-old insists. "So I hope people take encouragement from this documentary."

AMBER RAY
amber.ray@metro.us

A sense of pride

Steinem calls her embodiment of the women's rights movement "a gift."

"I'm not crazy enough to think that it was about one person," she explains. "But because I symbolize it, I get the stories. People will say to me, 'Oh, I want to tell you what happened and how my life has changed.' It is amazing."

Not a hero to everyone

Despite — or because of — her equal-rights work, Steinem still has her share of detractors. "I remember some guy saying to me on the street, 'I employ 20 women, and I pay them half what I pay men. If I had to pay them more, I'd fire them. What do you think of that?'" she recalls. "So I say, 'What's your name? You've broken the law.' Mostly I get attacked by people that if they liked me, I'd know I was doing something wrong."

Netflix presses pause

Once a haven for indie films, the service is now almost exclusively concerned with big-name studios Two local artists on their experiences

In 1997 — the year Netflix was founded — DIY films were almost entirely locked out of the big box stores, such as Blockbuster. Then along came Netflix, buying up every indie film in sight.

For roughly the first 10 years of its existence, Netflix provided a venue for truly independent filmmakers. But getting a film into their catalog became steadily more difficult from 2008 to 2010. In 2011, it's next to impossible, but at least two local filmmakers are doing all they can to get their films into that red envelope.

"When Netflix started, what they needed was titles. It was fairly easy as an indie feature with limited distribution to get your title added to their library," says Katharine Clark Gray of A Chip & A Chair Films, a three-person production company in Philly. "But as they grew, it became easier to get content from the major providers, so now they don't feel the need to appeal to indies."

Because A Chip & A Chair has a distributor, Vanguard Cinema, they were able to make their latest, "If You Could Say It in Words," available on the Netflix site. But they were surprised to discover a new hurdle when customers attempted to view the movie: It is only available to "save," not to watch. These days, Netflix waits for an indie title to have an unspecified number of "saves" before they actually make it available.

"Let's face it, they're the belle of the ball. At this point, they're very important to how we as a country consume media," says Jamie Moffett, of the Kensington-based Jamie Moffett Media and Design. "Their success has created a bottleneck for indie films, because they can sit back and absorb the studio material."

Networking for Netflix

Moffett recently launched a Facebook petition on behalf of two of his documentaries, "Return to El Salvador" and "The Ordinary Radicals" (visit www.dearnetflix.com to access it). Although even if the campaign works, neither Moffett nor Gray expect huge returns for being added to the behemoth site. It looks like, if added, they will be compensated somewhere between $2,500 and $9,000. The budget for "Return to El Salvador" alone was over $100,000.

You may — or may not — recognize Fenimore

The New Hope native's playful media campaign to become "the most recognizable man in America" launched last year.

We've got to admit: We didn't recognize his name, but we're happy to give him some face time.

POLICE OFFICER

Positions available for the Townships of Abington, Cheltenham, Limerick, Lower Moreland, Lower Providence, Upper Dublin, Upper Moreland, Towamencin and Warminster and the Boroughs of Bryn Athyn, Hatboro, Norristown and West Conshohocken.

How to make it in Tinseltown

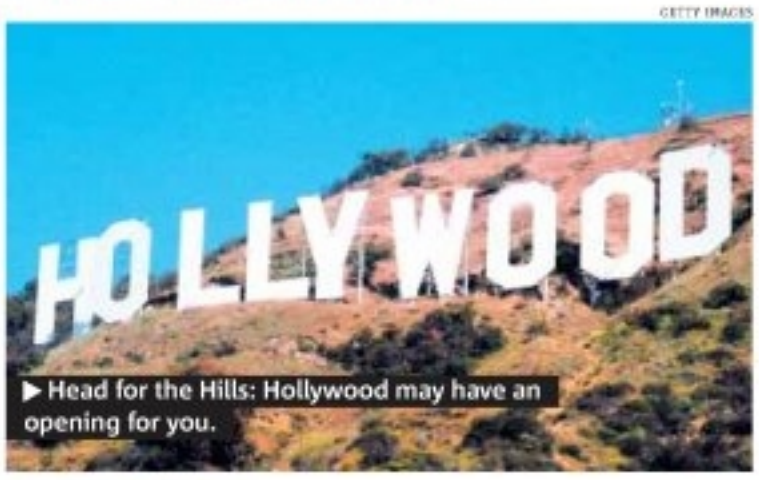
- New book goes behind the scenes with 30 insiders, from stuntwomen to executive producers to Chihuahua trainers
- Why the unorthodox industry might be a fit for you

If you're an aspiring actor, you already know there's most likely a cross-country career trip in your future. (What you don't know: Your 1991 Honda Civic is going to hit Ohio and decide to settle down.)

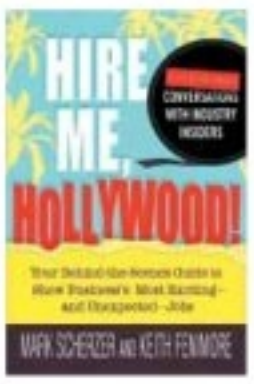
But from makeup artists to film editors to on-set tutors, there is a huge team of professionals required to keep the machine moving. In their new book — the just-released "Hire Me, Hollywood!" — industry vets Mark Scherzer and Keith Fenimore profile 30 insiders, providing start-up tips and behind-the-scenes info along the way. "This book is proof that you do have a chance," says Fenimore. "You can get your foot in the door with no experience, no connections and be successful. We're not trying to say it's a how-to book — it's a how-did book."

Whether you want to write for "The Daily Show" or design "Dancing With the Stars" costumes, here are three breaking-in tips.

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Head for the Hills: Hollywood may have an opening for you.



Go to Los Angeles — at first, at least

Both Scherzer and Fenimore now work in New York after paying their dues in L.A., where there are more openings for wannabe red-carpet pundits. "If you're looking to get the most bang for your buck, it's the place to be," says Scherzer.

Be your determined, slightly inappropriate self

Unlike conventional fields, the entertainment industry is fueled by characters, and is tolerant — even welcoming — of the newbie with a slightly offbeat approach to getting hired. "In Hollywood, mistakes are what get you hired," says Fenimore. "You don't crash interviews on Wall Street, you just don't do that, but sets are a different story."

Take any job, and then take it seriously

While there is room for the inexperienced, Hollywood is still "who you know." Which is why Scherzer recommends putting in the hours once you land a job as an assistant's assistant: "Make sure that you're the first one on the set and the last one to leave. You're often asked to do menial jobs, but you do it with a great attitude because it's all about relationships."

Ramp up your expectations with US!

US Airways is hiring Ramp Agents at Philadelphia International Airport!

Our Ramp Agents play a vital role in the overall customer experience by making sure that our travelers' luggage arrives to their destination in a safe and efficient manner. This is a physical job that includes repetitive movements such as loading and unloading baggage to and from the aircraft in various weather conditions. This is a good opportunity to stay in shape without spending the extra cash on a gym membership.

There may be extensive contact with our customers so being professional and courteous throughout your entire shift is a key part of the job. A friendly, smiling face could make the difference between a good customer experience and a great customer experience.

Requirements include:
- Must be 18 years of age or older
- Must have a valid driver's license
- Must have a high school diploma or GED

Our agents must be very knowledgeable about what we have to offer because customers may have numerous questions regarding fares, schedules, and destinations. We want to make sure that when our customers have completed their call they have the information needed to have a comfortable, stress-free travel experience with our airline.

If you are ready for a rewarding yet challenging career, apply for our Ramp Agent position and come work with US!

CENTER CITY DISTRICT 20 YEARS

CENTER CITY DISTRICT RESTAURANT WEEK PRESENTED BY TD BANK

September 12-16 and 18-23

EIGHT YEARS OF RESTAURANT WEEK AND STILL GOING STRONG!

Center City District Restaurant Week Presented by TD Bank is one of the most anticipated events of the year. Restaurant Week returns for its 17th season, September 12-16 and September 18-23. During those two consecutive weeks, you will find three-course meals for $35 in 120 restaurants and three-course lunches for just $20 in 50 of these eateries. (Prices do not include tax, alcohol and gratuity.) Don't miss all the fun, excitement and fresh flavors of Center City District Restaurant Week Presented by TD Bank. Visit CenterCityPhila.org on your computer or mobile device to view the restaurants' menus and to make reservations. See page 7 for more information on our new mobile site! And be sure to make reservations early to guarantee a place at the table.

And as always, The Philadelphia Parking Association and Philadelphia Parking Authority will offer a place for your car at the deep discount of $9 or less at dozens of lots and garages all over Center City. Park after 5pm in a participating garage and bring back your parking voucher from dinner to receive your discounted price. Visit CenterCityPhila.org for a list of locations.

WHAT'S NEW THIS TIME AROUND?

This September's Restaurant Week will be even more exciting – and green! Philadelphia has been a front-runner in the local food movement for a while and now Restaurant Week will bring homegrown dishes to your table. Inspired by our partner, Philly Homegrown, a program of GPTMC, each restaurant participating in Center City District Restaurant Week Presented by TD Bank will showcase at least one dish that uses the bounty of vegetables, fruit, meat, poultry, seafood or herbs available in our region. Menus are available online for each restaurant. Look for the red tractor on each for the locally sourced dishes. Philly Homegrown encourages consumers to support the local food system and regional economy by focusing on foods grown and produced within 100 miles of the city. This effort is designed to broaden the market for local foods and help celebrate the local food movement.

WHAT'S ON YOUR CHEF'S MIND

Q: Why does your restaurant participate in Restaurant Week?

A: Restaurant Week just keeps people buzzing about how great the Philly restaurant scene is. When it's such a great bargain to dine out, I think guests typically like to try new things and new places. It kicks off the fall season and we see a lot of new friends coming through the dining room.

Q: How long have you been cooking?

A: Most of my life really…It has been a hobby since I was very young, so I feel fortunate to have been able to translate it into work that I love.

Q: What do you love best about being a chef?

A: There is something very special about cooking a meal for guests and everything that goes into that.

Opa
Exec. Chef
Andrew Brown

Q: What is your favorite local dish on your Restaurant Week menu for September?

A: Tourlou. It shows the bounty of summer.

Q: As a first time participant, what are you hoping to gain from Restaurant Week and what are you most looking forward to?

A: Opening Philadelphia's palate to modern Greek cuisine. Also, having first time guests enjoy themselves and becoming frequent guests of Opa.

Q: What do you love best about being a chef?

A: Challenging myself every day.

Q: What is your favorite local dish on your Restaurant Week menu for September?

A: Lamb Timballo.

Q: Why does your restaurant participate in Restaurant Week?

A: It gives people an opportunity to come in and sample our food at a great price, and also is a great way to bring in new customers.

Q: What do you love best about being a chef?

A: I love making people happy.

CENTER CITY COOKS: RECIPES FROM CENTER CITY DISTRICT RESTAURANT WEEK IN PARTNERSHIP WITH PHILLY HOMEGROWN

During Center City District Restaurant Week Presented by TD Bank the Center City District will choose some of your treasured dishes from your favorite restaurants and compile the recipes in a brand new online cookbook, "Center City Cooks." On the first day of Restaurant Week, September 12, this exciting new addition to our website will launch. You'll find more than a dozen seasonal recipes from some of the top restaurants in Center City. Along with the recipes will be tips from the chefs and other useful cooking information. Plus, Philly Homegrown will help you identity foods that are fresh, local and immediately available and tell you where to find those local ingredients. You can also visit their website for the latest news about Philadelphia's local food scene.

RESTAURANT WEEK ON THE GO

Also new this year, you can easily access Center City District Restaurant Week Presented by TD Bank on the go! Center City District Restaurant Week Presented by TD Bank now has a mobile website. Visit m.centercityphila.org or scan the code on the following page to find a list of participating restaurants. You can search alphabetically, by cuisine or by name. From there, map the location of the restaurant and get directions, call them directly or view their Restaurant Week menu. See something you like? Make a reservation right from your phone. And don't fret if you don't have a smartphone, all the same great information is still available for your laptop or desktop at CenterCityPhila.org. Both sites are available throughout the entire year so when you're looking for a great place to eat the other ten months of the year, be sure to stop by.

SOCIAL NETWORKING

Restaurant information for Restaurant Week and beyond can be found by following us on Twitter and Facebook. Get access to Restaurant Week news and events and be the first to know when dates for future promotions are announced. On top of great Restaurant Week information, get updates on Center City restaurants and chefs all year long.

COME BACK FOR A SECOND HELPING OF RESTAURANT WEEK

JAN. 22-27 & JAN. 29 - FEB. 3, 2012

SPONSORS AND PARTNERS OF CENTER CITY DISTRICT RESTAURANT WEEK PRESENTED BY TD BANK

Restaurant Week would not be possible without the help and support of our many sponsors and partners.

TD Bank

We are proud to have TD Bank, America's Most Convenient Bank®, as a presenting sponsor of Center City District Restaurant Week. TD Bank, America's Most Convenient Bank®, is committed to supporting the individuals, businesses and nonprofits that help Philadelphia thrive. Through TD Charitable Foundation, their charitable giving arm, they support the community with investments in affordable housing, financial literacy and education and the environment. Through their sponsorship of Restaurant Week, along with the Philadelphia International Bike Championship and Philadelphia Q-Fest, they help to bring excitement to the city while supporting local businesses and our diverse communities.

NEW

Philly Homegrown

REAL LOCAL FLAVOR

Through our partnership with Philly Homegrown®, a program of Greater Philadelphia Tourism Marketing Corporation (GPTMC), we're able to bring local dishes to your Restaurant Week table and launch our online cookbook. Philly Homegrown promotes the people, places and flavors of the area's 100-mile foodshed - from Amish Country to the Atlantic Ocean. Philly Homegrown encourages you to taste and sip your way through the local Philly food scene, where every foodie can find exactly what they're craving in Philadelphia. To plan your locavore experience, go to visitphilly.com/food.

ABSOLUT Country of Sweden ORIENT APPLE

Absolut has been a great sponsor of Restaurant Week for many seasons now. While out for Restaurant Week be sure to try Absolut's newest flavor, Orient Apple. And throughout the rest of the year, enjoy all of the Absolut flavors available.

PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION & VISITORS BUREAU

www.PhiladelphiaUSA.travel

The Philadelphia Convention & Visitors Bureau (PCVB) helps to bring their member restaurants to Restaurant Week. A private non-profit membership corporation, the PCVB is the official Tourism Promotion Agency for the City of Philadelphia and the primary sales and marketing agency for the newly expanded Pennsylvania Convention Center.

We would also like to thank Rittenhouse Row, OpenTable, The Philadelphia Parking Association and Philadelphia Parking Authority. It is through the help of the last two sponsors that discounted parking is available during Restaurant Week.

Breaking your work addiction

Being a workaholic doesn't just have a negative impact on your personal life — it could also harm your career

When you're already prone to workaholism, living in the smartphone decade doesn't help. If you don't take a step back to draw boundaries between the conference room and the living room, work life-coach Sue Thompson warns, you could sacrifice your free will to a phone.

"We no longer have a work life and a home life," she says. "We have a life and we really need to decide how we want to live that life."

It's important to make the time to ask yourself that existential question, agrees Careers By Design Founder Shirin Khamisa.

"We no longer have a work life and a home life. We have a life and we really need to decide how we want to live that life."
SUE THOMPSON

"Look at your habits, get a reality check," she says. "Is the way you're functioning really serving you? If you're texting at the dinner table, how is that affecting your interaction with your family? If you're a young, single person, how does always being connected affect your personal life?"

Keeping your thumbs surgically attached to the phone could hurt more than your dating career, she notes. It could destroy your actual career. Ask yourself: Is it truly worth hammering away into the deep night, before slumping to work the next morning tired, hollow and ineffective?

"Start thinking in terms of results," she urges.

Create a switch

Trouble disconnecting? Create what career counselor Courtney Anderson calls "a mental switch."

"Take that switch and say 'I'm off, I'm logging off,'" she recommends. "Take personal time. Otherwise, with technology, it's possible to be always working."

Change your clothes

"Dress professionally for work," Thompson offers. "That way, when you get home and you take off those clothes, that's your psychological barrier that shows you're at home."

If you don't, Anderson adds, you could lose perspective.

"If you don't make that serious effort, it's all going to blend in," she says. "In five or 10 years, it's going to be even harder."

The benefit of living in dorms

They're cramped and noisy, and a party is never more than two doors away But surprisingly, living in the quad could help you study and boost your GPA

Plenty of studies have shown that students who live on campus tend to do slightly better academically. But a recent study out of Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis found that not only did on-campus students do significantly better academically, but that living on campus was a big reason why they did better.

"The big question is causation. Does living in the dorms cause you to do better? Previous studies were just looking at those that live in the dorms versus those that don't," explains Dr. James Murray, who co-authored the study with Dr. Pedro De Araujo. "The problem is that students that care more about school may be more likely to want to live at school. So, they may perform better, because they happen to be the better students anyway. But we actually found that living on campus caused students to do better, at least in terms of GPA."

The researchers also found that campus life had a positive effect even after the student moved out of the dorms. "Students who once lived on campus were more likely to study with their peers after they moved off campus, but not necessarily while they lived on campus," explains Murray. "So, if you're a freshman living on campus, you're not more likely to study with your classmates, but you formed those relationships in the early years and were able to make use of them later."

"Students who once lived on campus were more likely to study with their peers after they moved off campus, but not necessarily while they lived on campus."
DR. JAMES MURRAY

It helps in the long run, too

Just one year on campus could have a positive effect for years to come.

"If administrators are looking at the impact [that] dorms are having on student performance, they shouldn't just look at how [the] students are doing when they're living on campus," says Murray. "What you really want to look for are these permanent effects. Two or three years down the line, what's the story?"

Why poison our future?

This coming September, our House of Representatives will attempt to pass a budget bill that represents the worst single attack on our country's air, water, wildlife and land to date. It will dismantle bedrock environmental and public-health protections that have saved and improved millions of American lives. It will put the health of millions at risk by blocking protections against life-threatening mercury and toxic pollution.

JIM WURSTER, SPRINGFIELD

Hogtoberfest is barbarism

RE: "AN ISLAND OF THEIR OWN": One day Nantucket will consider Hogtoberfest as "cruel and outdated" as whaling. Hogs and pigs are kept in such inhumane conditions that they're driven insane. Many are sold off and tortured in the name of science and defense.

ROSA MICHNYA, PHILADELPHIA

Tea Party: Then and now

In 1787, the United States faced many problems — including a large debt from years of war. It wasn't that there insufficient wealth to support repayment; it was that the dysfunctional central government couldn't collect taxes to pay with. The solution was to create a strong federal government that could meet our obligations. The original Boston Tea Party helped reject monarchy and move us forward to the Articles of Confederation. The current "Tea Party" movement claims to be the same, but it's the opposite: rejecting the Constitution and moving us backward to the Articles of Confederation.

Blind leading the morons?

Someone must think the morons are a bunch of morons if someone thinks the morons think that anyone is interested in negotiating with the morons nowadays.

EDWARD HANLEY, VIA E-MAIL

It's the haves vs. the halves

This is just more of the same: The poor stay poor and the rich get even richer. The average working person that pays taxes with a salary of pennies has to bail out banks, and now we have to pay for this double recession. The rich are still hoarding wealth while most of the U.S. struggles to put food on the table.

ERIC SMITH, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Try to see the whole picture before getting involved in a business negotiation. With the facts at your disposal, you're likely to make the right decision without a lot of rehashing.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Don't team up with someone who isn't as enthusiastic about an endeavor as you are. This person could easily pour cold water on your efforts at the first sign of trouble.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Do not allow outside influences to rush you into anything you haven't had time to consider. Take the necessary time to think through all of your alternatives before putting your plans into action.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. The best way to finalize something important is to allow it to proceed at its natural pace. Attempting to rush it could get matters off course.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Enjoy yourself without bruising your wallet. It's one of those days when you don't need expensive diversions in order to have fun.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. There's a chance you could be somewhat of a dreamer and let your attention wander off. Strive to pay attention.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. You have a tendency to start one thing but then jump onto another before you completed the first. Don't let that habit cause you to end up with too many unfinished projects.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. The best way to make an important decision is to study it closely and then decide on the solution. Once everything is considered, the answer will be manifest. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

King for a day: Pence just living the dream

Newest Phillie looking for World Series ring ◗ Says he's fortunate to be on this team ◗ Loves city, fans

Hunter Pence looks around Citizens Bank Park and sees hundreds of fans donning his jersey. He looks around the ballpark and sees it filled to capacity every night.

A couple of weeks after the trade from Houston to the Phillies, Pence is still a little bit in awe of his new surroundings.

"It's unbelievable," Pence said. "Really, I'm overwhelmed a little bit. I'm ecstatic to be here. They've treated me like a king over here. It's been just awesome."

Getting that coveted right-handed bat only enhanced the Phillies' lineup. The team has won 12 out of 14 with Pence in the lineup, and own the best record in the majors.

More importantly, Pence has a legitimate shot at a World Series title. Does it get any better?

"That passion, I mean who wouldn't want to play for a city like this," said Pence, who is 13-for-38, including three home runs over his last 10 games. "The passion here with the type of team you have ... We are all very fortunate to be on this team."

"Philly is a good city ... You bring your lunch box and get after it."
PENCE

Pence played here as a visiting player and heard about the fans. None of that bothered him when he found out he was traded. Instead, he reveled in the transition.

"I love it and I feed off that," Pence said. "Philly is a good city and my passion fits in with them. I like this mentality. You bring your lunch box to work and get after it."

Kalas unveiling pushed back after rain postponement

The Nationals and Phillies were rained out yesterday at Citizens Bank Park.

The game was rescheduled for Sept. 20 at 1:05 p.m. as part of a split doubleheader against Washington. Tickets for the postponed game will be honored at that time.

The Phils defeated the Nationals, 11-3, Saturday night, following a 4-2 loss to Washington Friday.

Meanwhile, the unveiling ceremony for the Harry Kalas statue will take place before tomorrow's game against Arizona.

First pitch is scheduled for 7:05, with the ceremony slated for 6:40. Fans are encouraged to arrive early for the festivities. METRO

Adu makes Union debut, still needs 'game fitness'

Ever since Freddy Adu entered Major League Soccer as a 14-year-old phenom with DC United, he has created a buzz.

Eight years later, the buzz is still there as dozens of Union fans were already donning his jersey, just 24 hours after he signed with the club.

Adu got the start and played more than 60 minutes in his Philly debut, a 2-2 tie vs. FC Dallas this past Saturday at PPL Park.

Saturday

Union at Columbus Crew, 7:30 p.m.

"We gave him a start and it was important for us not to push the envelope too much," Union manager Peter Nowak said. "You can see he still needs the game fitness. I think he understood the concept of the 60 minutes he played. We have to figure out the tactical part, we have to see where he fits in our system. For the first time, it was good to have him."

Adu hasn't been a part of MLS since 2007, when he was with Real Salt Lake.

"I was excited to have the fans chanting and cheering for me," said Adu, who has 12 career MLS goals. "This fan base is incredible. I'm looking forward to the rest of the games this season and helping the Union win matches. I'm just so happy to be back in MLS."

Birds throwing fastballs

Castillo, Eagles defense impressive in debut ◗ Reid endorses 'fastball' theory ◗ Players respect team's new defensive coordinator ◗ Improved in red zone

Eagles coach Andy Reid called it the fastball theory.

Under new defensive coordinator Juan Castillo and new defensive line coach Jim Washburn, the Eagles' defense is going to be swarming, in attack mode.

Basically, they want to throw as many fastballs at the opposition as they can by constantly rotating defensive linemen.

"That's hard on an offensive line," Reid said. "You think you're just wearing one guy down, and all of the sudden the [defensive line] brings in a new crew."

In the team's preseason opener, the Eagles collected six sacks, picked up a fumble and snared two interceptions. All in all, it was an impressive debut.

"The guys played fast. They were physical, and there were some good fundamentals," Castillo said. "As always we still have some weaknesses, and it takes a little bit of time to get everything right."

Even though the first-team defense only saw about eight reps, the energy was evident. And that can be traced to Castillo.

"Sometimes, you see changes in coaches from practices to game days. They get a little stage fright, but Juan didn't have any of that," cornerback Nnamdi Asomugha said. "He was the same excited guy, running up and down the field and calling the plays we worked on, not putting guys in tough positions. Everyone respects that about him."

Castillo was especially excited about the goal-line stand his substitutes pulled off in the closing seconds. Last season, the Eagles owned the NFL's worst red-zone defense in two decades. Yesterday, Castillo said he wasn't worried about 2010.

"I'm worried about 2011 and about looking at what happened today in practice and go from there," Castillo said.

MIKE GREGER

Name game

Don't call Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie DRC. The Eagles young cornerback doesn't want that nickname to stick. "His name is Dominique, and he told me he doesn't really like DRC," said Juan Castillo.

Somebody call for the 'Shot Doctor'?

Magee inducted into Basketball Hall of Fame • Winningest coach in NCAA history with 922 victories • Has no plans to retire anytime soon

Herb Magee has probably told the story at least as many times as he's won a game. Which means 922 and counting. But probably never in a more appropriate venue.

"Some people would say, 'Why can't this guy get another job?'" said 70-year-old Magee, who was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame this past Friday as the winningest coach in NCAA history. "The way I looked at it was, I already had the best job. And, as I look around here, I think it's been proven I made the right decision.

"I look up at the pictures of all these Hall of Famers, and to think that my picture will be up there one day is just an unbelievable thrill."

No, that's not what drove the kid from West Catholic to Philadelphia Textile (now Philadelphia University) in the late 1950s. Magee wanted to play for Dr. Jack Ramsay at Saint Joseph's, but the offer never came.

Instead, he played four years at Textile and set all kinds of scoring records, then stayed as a combined golf/track/tennis/jayvee basketball coach. Eventually, Magee took over the reins as head basketball coach in 1966 — and he's been there ever since, with no interest in stopping.

Especially with 1,000 wins not that far away.

"It's not as if they're recognizing me because I retired a few years ago," said Magee. "They're recognizing me because of what we've been able to accomplish and I'm still going to do it. I don't see any end to it."

Meaning that story he loves to tell will still have a long life to it.

Did you know?

- Magee's 29.1 points per game, set in the 1961-62 season, is still the school record at Philly U.
- Magee was drafted 62nd overall by the Boston Celtics in 1963, but two broken fingers caused him to miss training camp.

Bentley offers luxury, low blood pressure

It might cost as much as four-bedroom house, but new Mulsanne's worth it to ultra-rich ◐ About $200K more than Mercedes, BMW ◐ One reporter takes a test drive

▶ The new Bentley Mulsanne.

GETTY IMAGES

Step into the $285,000 Bentley Mulsanne, and odd things happen. Your heart rate drops. The softball-sized knot between your shoulders shrinks to a marble.

Unlike white-knuckle-driving supercars that cost more than a house in Florida, this luxury sedan induces a vastly different reaction. Breath out, relax. You're rich, after all.

Owners of the Mulsanne or its competitor, the $246,500 Rolls-Royce Ghost, are of a different ilk than those who drive the Mercedes-Benz S-Class or BMW 7 Series. There's an inherent declaration of check-me-out entitlement.

Yet the two brands have a different approach. If the Ghost wears its extravagance on its bespoke sleeve, the Bentley is a less showy.

At more than 18 feet long, it's certainly formidable. It would be hard to overlook the fantastic upright mesh grill and headlights the size of salad plates. But to really be wowed, you have to be invited in. My test car cost $333,885 with options, and my favorite element was the $4,640 interior in oak wood — a shade so light it seemed to glow.

More quickly than I hoped, I found myself on Manhattan's West Side Highway. I'd only used the horn twice. I was so relaxed that I decided to really get wild and exit onto Broadway toward Times Square; tourists pointed.

Minutes later I'd left behind the cold light of oversized LCD screens and was skirting past the taxi wars outside Penn Station with the Mulsanne's torque-heavy engine pulling me by. There was no stopping me now. BLOOMBERG

Gas guzzler

What would stress me would be trying to find a gas station in the city — a common occurrence since the Mulsanne manages only 11 mpg in the city, 18 highway. No wonder it gets socked with a $3,700 gas-guzzler tax.
